HOME EDUCATION PROCEDURES

The compulsory school attendance laws in Pennsylvania were amended December 12, 1988, and a new section on home education was added to the School Code. Act 169 creates a home education category designed to permit parents, guardians and legal custodians to teach their children. The parent or guardian, called a "supervisor" must hold a high school diploma or its equivalent, and has broad responsibility for the education of the child. This guideline summarizes the provisions of the new law and outlines the obligations of the home-education parent, the Superintendent and the school district. The guidelines and attachment are based on Basic Education Circular. 13-1327.1 ISSUED SEPTEMBER, 1997.

As set forth below, school district superintendents exercise certain responsibilities concerning home education programs for resident children before they begin, and to review the programs so that they may be assured that each child educated at home receives an appropriate education.

AFFIDAVIT

Before the home education of any child begins, the child's parent, guardian or legal custodian who will be providing instruction to the child must file an affidavit with the Superintendent of the child's district of residence. The affidavit must contain the following:

1. The name of the supervisor, the name and age of each child in the program, and the address and phone number of the program sites.
2. An outline of proposed educational objectives, by subject area, for the subjects required by law. These subjects include:
 - (1) Elementary Level
 - a. English, to include spelling, reading and writing.
 - b. Arithmetic.
 - c. Science.
 - d. Geography.
 - e. History of the United States and Pennsylvania.
 - f. Civics.
 - g. Safety, including regular and continuous instruction in the dangers and prevention of fires.
 - h. Health and physiology.
 - i. Physical education.
 - j. Music.
 - k. Art.

(2) Secondary Level

- a. English, to include language, literature, speech and composition.
- b. Science.
- c. Geography.
